HARVARD-YALE GAME 'MOVIES' WILL BE SHOWN

The Harvard Club of Hawaii will show the moving picture film and slides of last fall's Harvard-Yale game Friday evening at 8 o'clock in Charles R. Bishop hall.

The general public and the students in the schools are especially invited to be present. Since these pictures were displayed at the University Club to the University Club members, there has been a very general request that they be shown so that people in general who are interested can have a chance to see the pictures.

Both the film and the slides are unusually interesting. The film gives a good general idea of the bowl and the crowds and the game; the slides depict the plays in series, showing successive stages of each play. This makes the pictures interesting, not only for the person who likes to see how the play is run off, but also for the football expert, who by means of the slide can study the strategy of the game.

The pictures are accompanied by an account of the game written by football experts in the East.

JAPANESE WOMAN WORKER ON WAY TO THE STATES

Miss Michi Kawai, National Y. W. C. A. Secretary For Japan, Tells of Work

Miss Michi Kawai, representing the Y. W. C. A. of Japan, passed through Honolulu on the Chiyo Maru today on her way to the biennial convention to be held in Los Angeles this month. Miss Kawai is the national secretary of the association and in conversation yesterday stated that the work is growing in her country, there being over 7000 members. The Tokio branch of the association now has a fine large building in the central part of the city nearing completion where accommodations for a larger number of women are being made, the small dormitories not filling the present need. When asked if many strangers stayed at the Y. W. C. A., she said: "Oh, yes, but we have provided separately for foreigners. We have a Foreigners Club, and that is a separate branch of the association and many times we are overcrowded there."

Miss Kawai is a school teacher in Japan and a graduate of Vassar College, class of 1904. Since that time she has made one trip to Europe and two to the United States. This is her third to the mainland. She will remain on the Pacific coast until fall investigating the immigration question and other things which concern Japan.

SMART CONTEST IS APPARENTLY ALL SETTLED UP

pending and not completely settled. In contradiction is a rumor that all the papers have been signed in the agreement disposing of the entire affair and that all that remains is to get the approval of Judge Antonio Perry, temporary guardian of the child, before the terms of the agreement are submitted to the court for final acceptance.

The manner in which the opposing sides of the controversy over the big Parker estate finally disposed of the one point that had proved the serious bone of contention—the guardianship of Richard Smart—is not known. On the question of the estate's division, the income to be received by Mrs. Knight and the share as between the minor and his father, H. G. Smart, on this phase of the affair it has long been said the parties at issue had agreed substantially, the terms being practically the same as originally agreed upon at the time when the row over the guardianship or custody of the child caused a break in the negotiations.

It is believed that by next Tuesday the terms of the entire settlement may be ready for submission to the court.

It was reported today that Smart has given up the house which he rented in Nuuanu valley and, in company with his mother and brother, will leave within a few days for his home in Virginia. Friends of Mrs. Knight say that she had her baby grandson in town yesterday and was purchasing an extensive wardrobe for him.

Intimate friends of Smart and Mrs. Knight declared today that the case is either settled or about to be. The baby, who was brought here from Hawaii, now is in charge of Mrs. Lemon at Waikiki. Mrs. Lemon had charge of the child on the Big Island.

PASSENGER MAKES FLYING LEAP TO CATCH STEAMER

Some excitement was created at the sailing of the Chiyo Maru this morning. A belated Japanese passenger, arriving at the wharf as the ship was moving away, sprang and caught a fender rope that was hanging down the side of the vessel. He made a desperate attempt to climb the rope, but his strength failed as he neared the rail, and had it not been for deck hands coming to the rescue the man would have fallen into the sea. He was safely landed on the deck of the vessel.

WILY SPANIARD OF GUAM CAUGHT BY P. O. SLEUTH

Earl P. Smith, United States post office inspector, who was a through passenger on the Chiyo Maru today, has the distinction of finally nailing what has been the wildest defrauding of the United States government in the Pacific when he arrested Captain Pedro Duarte, postmaster at Guam, on a charge of embezzling $40,000. The feature of the arrest was the fact that the postoffice authorities have known of the leak in the Guam office ever since Duarte's appointment in 1903, but each inspector sent to investigate returned with the story that the office was satisfactory.

Where former inspectors failed Smith forced Duarte to confess, and although his mission to the island was strictly in the interest of the post-office affairs, he learned things which will probably lead to investigations of other irregularities and eventually cause a shakeup in Guam's officeholders.

Duarte was sentenced to 10 years in the Bilibid at Manila by Chief Justice Vincente Comacho in the Guam court of appeals, and was fined the extent of his defalcation, $40,000. His property is being confiscated to pay the fine, but contrary to the first report, he will not be held for additional sentence if the property value does not cover the fine. Influential Spaniards who have always cleared him in the past by lending him gold to balance his books pending an inspection, have been laying wires for his pardon. They have failed to reach the ear of President Wilson, who alone has the right to pardon federal prisoners.

It will be remembered that when the island of Guam came into the possession of United States in 1898 Spanish officeholders were retained. The old Spanish regime with ten or twelve leading Castilian families controlling the island was allowed to go on, and many customs of the old days were continued under American control. One of these customs preserved in secrecy was to borrow money from the government whenever there was a need. If not from the treasurer, from the postmaster.

When Captain Pedro Duarte of the Spanish navy was appointed postmaster in 1903 he did but fall into the ways of his predecessors of using postal money with the hope of paying it back. So clever was the old Spaniard that when inspectors were sent to account for the leak he always was cleared. The shortage was covered by the ready gold of his friends.

Duarte's method was to siphon from the money order funds, carrying a large amount "in transit" on his books and it was nearly impossible for the auditor to check him up in Washington, as it takes a transport four months to make the round trip from Guam to San Francisco and back, and when Duarte was called to account for large amounts missing, he always declared that these funds were "in transit" and the government was forced to let the matter drop allowing Duarte to make up the shortages by using borrowed money.

Last April the auditor in Washington noticed a heavy increase in the funds which Duarte was "carrying in transit," and it was resolved to "get" the old Spaniard this time. Some time as taken up with preliminary arrangements, and on February 15 last Inspector Smith arrived in Guam and took up the case.

Exposure was inevitable as the shortage had become too big to be covered. All kinds of speculative schemes were tried by the wily Spaniard to make up his loss only to result in deeper deficit. The last scene of his 12-year financial tragedy was laid in a cabin of the United States transport Thomas bound for Manila with a U. S. soldier guarding his door. Inspector Smith intimated that the housecleaning thus started in "the dark little island" may reveal some more startling irregularities.

The Du Pont Nitrate Company purchased the nitrate stock of the South American Nitrate Company of Talait, Chile, for $1,500,000.
